RE: William Venegas Lloveras - a.k.a. Guillermo Venegas Lloveras
composer deceased on July 23, 1993.

Gentlemen:

I'm the widow and heir to Guillermo Venegas Lloveras who died on July 23, 1993.

Under the law, Copyright reverted to the composer after its first term of Copyright, unless reassigned. Furthermore, and particularly if the publishers part of the contract was not fulfilled.

You had no right to renewal, unless such works were reassigned to you. Apparently, you have been also claiming works of my late husband that were never assigned to you.

I'm requesting an immediate, complete and total release of any assignment of Copyright for any of his works. Such release and reassignment will be recorded at the copyright office.

At this time I also request the proper notification to any and all of your licensees and a final and complete royalty report from any source and country where you have assigned and from you have collected royalties. Such information must also be provided to any and all Performance Societies to which any of the composers work was assigned by you. I have no information that Guillermo Venegas my late husband ever assigned any of his works to any performance organization.

This termination is final and all of his works and all the proper and legal steps should be taken so that I may have complete control of all of his works.

Yours truly;
